

tively intellectual and of inquiry, discussion, debate, and respectful disagreement, vigorous pursuit of knowledge and understanding both independently and collaboratively; the highest standards of academic and intellectual honesty; and celebration of the arts through creation, performance, and appreciation.

2. Challenge and growth: A residential community brings together people of varying experiences, values, beliefs, and interests in the recognition that much learning and personal growth come through the creative friction created in contact with difference. Such a community also encourages its members to develop their own interests and talents as individuals and together in groups and provides opportunities for leadership and collaboration
3. Freedom of inquiry and expression: A learning community encourages free expression of widely varying views; it challenges assumptions and values.
4. Mutual respect and civility of discourse: In a learning community, differences are recognized and respected and disagreement is not meant or understood as personal animosity.
5. Concern for others: In a learning community, members care about their neighbors, encourage their achievements, and support them when they need assistance.
6. Shared responsibility for the community: A learning community requires honesty, high integrity, and personal responsibility of its members and expects that they will hold one another accountable for living up to these values. Members of such a community learn to collaborate with one another in solving community problems.
7. Friendship and fun: In a learning community, members find close and life-long friends, relax together, meet new people, and enjoy life. Active and varied athletic, recreational, and social activities provide a context for healthy fun, as do the spontaneous activities of students.
8. Connection to the larger community: A learning community, though it is relatively isolated from the immediate demands and commitments of the world but cannot accomplish its mission without meaningful connections that link it to that world outside. Learning is enriched through bonds between alumni, parents, and the College, through voluntary social service and other activities.

activities of its members which contribute to the quality of life at the College, in Brunswick, in Maine, and in the world beyond. The community offers opportunities to serve and celebrates the work of those who do so.

10. Affirmation of Bowdoin's history and its finest traditions: In a learning community at Bowdoin, members join together in solemn ceremonies such as Convocation and Commencement; at celebratory events such as Homecoming and Reunion Weekend; in myriad other recurrent events that remind the community members of their connections to one another and to the past and future of their College.
