We, the students of the Department of Psychology, are writing to you regarding the recent actions of Professor Miller. We are deeply concerned and distressed over the positions that Professor Miller has espoused on his highly publicized blog, "The Science of Transgender Abuse." In this blog, Miller characterizes transgender identity as a "mental illness" and "brain damage." He also claims that transgender individuals are "at risk of suicide" and "self-harm." These statements are not only factually incorrect but also deeply offensive to the transgender community. We are writing to you to express our disappointment and to request that you take action to address these concerns.

As a faculty member at the University of California, we expect our professors to adhere to the highest standards of academic integrity and respect for all students. Professor Miller's blog is a clear violation of these standards. His statements are not only factually incorrect but also deeply offensive to the transgender community. We are writing to you to express our disappointment and to request that you take action to address these concerns. We are also writing to you to request that you provide us with a copy of the blog post and any other materials that you have received from Professor Miller. We are also writing to you to request that you provide us with a copy of the University's policies regarding academic integrity and respect for all students. We are also writing to you to request that you provide us with a copy of the University's policies regarding the treatment of transgender students. We are also writing to you to request that you provide us with a copy of the University's policies regarding the treatment of transgender students. We are also writing to you to request that you provide us with a copy of the University's policies regarding the treatment of transgender students.
