

1

To perform its mission as a leading college of arts and communication, Emory College must sustain a vibrant tradition of intellectual inquiry, maintain its preeminence in political philosophy, and avoid actions that may have the unintended effect of silencing its courageous advocates. For these reasons, Emory College and its operating units will not take official positions on issues that are complex or political issues, nor will Emory College consider political philosophy a

